

Scripture Reading: Acts 9:1-6, (7-20)

As a well spent day brings happy sleep, so life well used brings happy death. —Leonardo da Vinci

When most people recall Jonathan Swift's novel, Gulliver's Travels, they think of the land of Lilliput with its diminutive inhabitants. Yet, Lilliput is not the only strange land the peripatetic Gulliver visits. One of the most chilling scenes is his visit to the land of Laputa.

There he encounters a tragic tribe of humanity known as the struldbrugs. "Struldbrug" is the name given by the Laputans to certain of their own people who are born with an unhappy curse: they will live forever.

Whenever a baby is born in Laputa, the first thing the mother looks for — even before she counts the fingers and toes — is a distinctive dark birthmark on the infant's head. If she sees no such birthmark, she rejoices. If the birthmark is present, then the mother and her kin begin mourning immediately, for this child will never die.

The difficulty is that, while struldbrugs never die, they still continue to age. Struldbrugs live a more-or-less normal life until they surpass 100 years or so, after which they experience dementia and all manner of physical infirmities. Eventually, they become little more than hollow husks of human beings — aimlessly wandering the countryside, howling in pain from arthritic joints that no longer work, minds emptied of all memory and personality.

The Bible teaches us that there is a wonderful alternative to the experience of the fictional struldbrugs. No one wants to live forever with aches and pains, weakness of mind and body. That's what death is: a release from these sorrows. But death is not the end of life! It is rather a portal that sends us to our new heavenly home, where, according to Revelation 21:4, God "will wipe every tear from their eyes. Death will be no more; mourning and crying and pain will be no more."

Now we can understand why the apostle Paul says in his letter to the Philippian church: "For to me, living is Christ and dying is gain. ... I am hard pressed between the two: my desire is to depart and be with Christ, for that is far better; but to remain in the flesh is more necessary for you (1:21, 23-24).

Yes, to "be with Christ" is "far better"!

Prayer: Lord, thank you for the promise of an eternal home. But until then, may I be your faithful servant. In your name. Amen.
